Acquisition Information: Accession 1979.2. Donation from Pearl Reins.

Processor and Date: Amber K. King, August 2010

Processing Note: Collection consists of one scrapbook. The container list consists of a description of what is on each page of the scrapbook. Some materials loose from page, these materials have been kept in their original location.

Many of the photographs, which dominate the second half of the scrapbook, are not dated, with no notation as to who is in them. Identification was made by looking at other photographs that were identified in the scrapbook unless there is a notation of identification that was found on the back of a photograph. Condition of scrapbook pages is poor, handle as little as possible.

Biographical Sketch: Amanda Parelus was born ca. 1888. When she was a small child, about 18 months old, she contracted polio, known at the time as infantile paralysis. At sixteen she had surgery to try and make it possible for her to walk without the use of crutches, but blood poisoning set in after the surgery and the leg had to be amputated. She lived in the Elmwood Park area of Chicago and had four children, two daughters and two step-daughters.

She worked as a milliner and dress-maker until an accident caused her to break her ankle when she was 28. Unable to move and no longer able to take the streetcar, Parelus opened up a pet shop and bird hospital out of her home, calling it the Scarlet Pet Shop and Bird Hospital. She moved the location of the business as time progressed, but she developed a skill for curing birds, particularly canaries. Although untrained as a veterinarian, she performed surgery on birds, removing growths and tumors and even amputating legs. She received attention from papers in the Chicago area for creating artificial legs for canaries and other birds and for applying the "Sister Kenny" method used to treat polio patients on birds experiencing paralysis. She applied hot packs, hot baths, and massage to afflicted birds similar to the procedure used in humans. She experienced some success, curing a parrot that was found suddenly motionless at the bottom of its cage.

Scope and Content: Materials and information about Amanda Parelus were taken from the information and photographs found within the scrapbook that comprises the collection to date.

Series Description:

Series 1: Scrapbooks (1942-1952, undated)

This series contains a scrapbook of Amanda Parelus' life. It contains newspaper and magazine clippings, letters, and photographic prints. It focuses primarily on her business, the Scarlet Pet Shop and Bird Hospital, and the work she did there helping sick birds, including performing surgery, making artificial legs for birds, and applying the Sister Kenny method of healing polio toward birds experiencing forms of paralysis. It also contains images, some identified and most not, of herself and others.
